

Garrett Morris began his career with the NRCS in September 2015 as a Soil Conservationist. He currently serves as a District Conservationist in Blakely, Georgia and the Georgia Black Emphasis Program Manager. Garrett has provided leadership to multiple field offices within his area and has focused on conservation planning, program implementation, and partnering with entities within the community. He also serves on several committees and teams, including the Georgia CSP Technical Committee and CSP Quality Assurance Review Team for Georgia.

A member of The NOPBNRCSE since 2015, Garrett serves in multiple capacities as the Georgia Chapter Vice President and Communications Committee Chair. He earned a Bachelor of Science (2012) from Tennessee State University in Agricultural Sciences with a focus in Plant Nutrient Deficiencies. He enjoys spending time with his family, serving as a youth mentor, horse-riding, and graphic design. Garrett looks forward to the opportunity to continue to serve The Organization.

Garrett states, "Farmers and landowners have invested in me, putting me in a better position to achieve what I want in life. Working within the NRCS and The Organization is the best way in which I can return the favor."
